

PARADE, PAGEANT AND FIREWORKS ON EL PASO PROGRAM FOR FLAG DAY

MORE than 2500 grade school pupils of El Paso will march in the flag day parade next Monday. Each of these children will carry an American flag supplied by the American legion. At night, when the legion's big fireworks and military show is staged in the high school stadium all children who march in the parade will be given a most free of charge, war tax paid "everything." There will be high school students in the parade as well as grade school students.

In the flag day parade will march not only children, but women. Every woman's society in the city has been invited to take part in the parade and the subsequent program. Probably 1500 women will march.

Soldiers from Fort Bliss will have a large part in the parade. Every organization at the fort will be represented. Under the direction of Gen. Robert L. Howe, district commander, the army is planning a program which in itself will be a big event. The parade will be no longer than a mile, so that the women and children will not have too far to walk.

The American legion, the Spanish war veterans, the veterans of the civil war and other patriotic and military societies will be represented in the line.

The show at night will be under the American legion's auspices. The lighting equipment has been for stalling at the stadium and will furnish 15,000 candle power when all the lights are lighted. The evening program will be opened by Lieut. J. R. Hupp, navy recruiting officer, who will supervise the flag raising. The first half of the program, after the flag raising, will consist of military numbers. The fireworks spectacular will be called "The Return of Peace." Exercises from a New York fireworks factory will superintend the display.

Witnesses Tell Of Bootlegging Ring At Negro's Hearing On Murder Charge; Hardin Is Held In The Northrup Case

THERE was a pressing demand for a case or two of hard liquor aboard the No. 10 Southern Pacific diner the night of May 22.

For a number of hours a trio of negro waiters, "laying over" in El Paso, scoured about town in search of a sufficient supply of whiskey to carry thirty and opulent passengers through the arid stretch between here and San Antonio.

The quest at the eleventh hour was successful. As No. 10 pulled out of the union station two sacks loaded with red bottles were dumped out of a taxi at the viaduct where the crack train always slows to a crawl.

With the sack over his left shoulder and a revolver in his right hand, a negro started down the track toward the slow-moving patch of light from the open kitchen door of the diner.

It was a good place for "the law" to be—except for the fact of the ready revolver. For Harry Northrup, Southern Pacific watchman, that made it a bad place.

Held Without Bond.

Such, in substance, are the facts leading directly to the murder of Northrup, as they were entered into the record Monday at the preliminary hearing of the murder charge against Mitchell Hardin before Judge R. B. Rawlin.

Hardin was held without bond to the county grand jury.

Passing Branch, a young negro, admitted he had been Hardin's companion in the taxi which brought him, the liquor and the revolver to the viaduct.

But when I saw the gun in Mitchell's hand I just told him I was through," he said. "He went away down the track with the sack over his shoulder and the gun ready, and then I heard three shots, one right after the other."

Tells Of Bootlegging Ring.

On direct examination Branch, who became a dining car waiter on his discharge from an R. A. T. C. camp in December, 1915, asserted he had no knowledge of what Hardin had in the sacks. But in the hands of Robert Neal, of counsel for the accused negro, he supplied a more or less comprehensive history of the operation of a bootlegging ring of dining car stewards, waiters and Pullman porters which has made El Paso one of the chief stocking-up points for many months.

Branch, who has identified Hardin as the negro with the liquor and the revolver, testified that his companion was apparently willing to fight anyone who might stand between him and successful performance of his errand.

"He showed me the gun and told me I'd be well protected if we saw anything that looked like the law," the witness said.

Branch asserted throughout his direct examination that he had been kept in the dark as to the reason for various trips made by fellow waiters that evening.

"I saw Eugene Ward, another waiter, spend the late afternoon with Ben Crawford, one of the train porters," he testified.

Met At Union Station.

"Ben had been talking to Mr. Billy Trimble about a boy that was going to ride out on No. 10 and Ben called me out from his home. Later we met him at the union station. It was Mitchell Hardin."

"I don't know what was said to me by the other boys at the station. He just came up and asked if any of us was Gene Ward. That was about 9 o'clock at night. Later Mitchell asked me if I wouldn't come down town with him while he got his clothes."

"We went to the Montgomery hotel and Mitchell went in and used the telephone. Night away a Ford car came up and we got in and rode to Dallas street and the tracks. That was where Mitchell got out of the car, took the sack and the gun. It was just a little while after I told him I wouldn't go with him that I heard the shooting."

Under cross examination Branch admitted that before starting away from the station with Hardin he had made a trip with Ward to an automobile stand at San Jacinto and Sacramento streets, where, he said, he knew liquor could be bought from the chauffeurs.

"Me and Ward went to the auto stand in a jitney," he said. "I waited while Ward went over and talked

El Pasoans Take Leading Part In Adclub Meeting

Indianapolis, Ind., June 8.—"Brass Tacks" is the slogan of the annual convention of the Associated Advertising Clubs of the World, which opened here Sunday, and the El Paso delegation has shown its appreciation of the serious spirit of the gathering by getting down promptly to the double business of promoting the fame of the Paso City and collecting the practical publicity ideas from the speeches of world-famous advertising specialists.

Under the plan worked out by officers of the El Paso club, the entire delegation attends the morning sessions of the convention, which are devoted to general advertising topics. In the afternoon each delegate is assigned to the duty of covering some special departmental conference.

A. R. Milligan made an effective talk Monday afternoon at the meeting of the club secretaries, much interest being manifested in his explanation of the El Paso plan under which the advertising publicity ideas from the speeches of world-famous advertising specialists.

Scott White is specializing on retail advertising. Fabian Stolaroff on business work. Percy Montgomery on financial advertising, and J. J. Behrendt on outdoor advertising.

Among the advertising exhibits in place at the state capital building is one by Mr. Montgomery. The little Mexican hat badges distributed by the El Paso delegation have made a hit as novel and appropriate gifts also been made for the distribution of some effective El Paso advertising ideas.

With three or four Mexican boys who were sitting in a machine.

After a while Ward went me back to the station in another machine. He told me to find Billy Trimble and get some money from him.

"You know what Ward was after and what the money was for, didn't you?" asked Mr. Neal.

"I suspected," said Branch. "That was the way things began to look. Just what do you mean?"

"Well, I knew the Mexican boys usually dealt in booze. I thought maybe Ward was going to buy some, or something like that."

"How much money did Ward tell you to get from Trimble?"

"He didn't estimate that."

"He didn't estimate that?"

"He said it had been framed up to get booze to not on the train and lay it off on Hardin."

"No, sir; nothing like that."

"As a matter of fact haven't Pullman cars and diners been going out of El Paso so full of booze for the last six months that a Chinaman could smuggle his way to Kansas City, say if he was able to get over from Mexico?"

"As to that I can't say."

"Didn't you know that Billy Trimble was handling liquor?"

"Well, I see him with it plenty of times and drinking it. He acted like he was fond of it."

GALVESTON STILL PROTESTS RULE BY MARTIAL LAW

the causeway and Virginia Point, on the mainland of Galveston county, Galveston island and some portions of Bolivar Peninsula, as are situated in Galveston county."

Switchmen Cause Trouble.

Refusal of switchmen to handle freight which had been loaded on cars at Galveston by nonunion men, it is claimed, precipitated the action of Governor Hobby in placing the city of Galveston and the county under martial law on Monday. Adjutant General W. C. Peckham issued a call for a staff of 100 officers, had hopes of starting the strike down at a conference on Monday. On Monday, however, the trouble began, according to reports received here, saying that the situation had grown worse and that the switchmen had declined to handle the cars. General Peckham then asked that martial law be declared.

The city authorities at Galveston strenuously objected to the governor's action. The strike would be a serious one with general Peckham held early Saturday morning, promised that the situation would be relieved and that freight on the docks would be moved, but it was soon apparent there was a hitch somewhere and the movement was not so easily accelerated to satisfy general Peckham.

"Open Shop" Involved.

It is said that the "open shop" question is at the heart of the whole trouble, and to sustain this point of view, it is pointed out that the original trouble arose at a conference at Galveston came from a committee from the Texas chamber of commerce, which advocates an open shop.

They can't put open shop conditions into effect here bringing in troops to Galveston, and the governor of Galveston is quoted as having stated to an assemblage of 1500 people at Galveston on Friday night, I. M. Bark, president of the Galveston labor council, is quoted as having said that the action of the governor was "outrageous."

The governor, in a statement, "reiterated the necessity of sending troops to Galveston, and declared that 'if commerce is not resumed soon and if freight is not moved without interruption, and responsibility will rest with the carriers, it will not be the fault of the state.'"

Governor Hobby last night said no issue with respect to labor or open shop organization was involved in his action and he was ready to protect the right of working men, or at least the question is whether the best interest of the state shall be served," he said.

Galveston, where interests, commercial organizations of the city on the one side and city commissioners and union labor men on the other, some time ago took part in a bitter political contest culminating in an election in which amendments to the city charter were adopted. One of these would authorize the city to sever its connection with the Galveston Wharf company. The wharf company and commercial interests interested.

The Tarascan Indian men and women, particularly the women, have the most wonderful hair in the world. It is soft, very dark, and of a rich texture which has caused wonderment to all who have ever seen a member of the tribe. As these people have lived since the days of the Aztecs in the inaccessible mountains of the State of Chihuahua, few people have ever seen them. They never venture from home. The only record of their life and customs is found in the dim records of some Spanish Mission in the foothills. The wedding ceremony is based upon the worship of beautiful hair, the quaint story of which has recently reached the United States.

HOT DEBATE OVER BILL TO PAY GUARDMEN'S EXPENSES

Austin, Texas, June 8.—There was a heated debate in the house today over final passage of the bill carrying an appropriation of $100,000 to defray the expenses of the Texas National Guard on duty at Galveston, which came up over an amendment offered by representative Holman, of Hopkins. The amendment was overwhelmingly defeated, there being only a few votes. An effort by representative Don Biggers, of Eastland, to reduce the appropriation to $15,000 was likewise defeated. The bill was then passed by a vote of 88 to 14, not sufficient to make the appropriation immediately available, as it requires two-thirds vote, or 55 affirmative votes, to make the bill effective immediately. Another effort will be made to call up the bill again this afternoon and try to pass it by the necessary two-thirds.

LEO TROST BRINGS SUIT AGAINST WESTERN UNION

Leo Trost has filed suit in the first district court here against the Western Union Telegraph company for $2000 damages for the alleged failure to deliver an important telegram.

Trost states in his petition that on August 16, 1919, his wife was in California visiting friends, and was severely burned in an airplane accident, the burns later causing her death. He stated that a telegram was immediately sent him from California and that he did not receive it, owing to the alleged carelessness of the telegram company, until the following afternoon. When he arrived in California, he declares, it was too late to move Mrs. Trost back to her home in El Paso.

EFFORT IS MADE TO SAVE LIFE OF CONDEMNED MAN

Judge W. D. Howe, in the fifth district court, has granted a bill of 30 exceptions in the case of Jose Peres, who was sentenced to death by a jury for the alleged murder of Maria Benback some time ago. The bill will be sent to the court of criminal appeals in Austin in an effort to have the death penalty set aside.
